BRAZIL: People in Poverty Benefit from Holistic Learning

Vocational center provides training for local residents and missionaries

PROJECT OVERVIEW

CONTEXT: Brazil, the largest country in South America, is home to more than 200 million people across five major regions. The Southern region is the wealthiest, but political power is held in the West Central region. The neighborhood of Valentina de Figueiredo in the Northeast has about 60,000 inhabitants. Though Catholicism is the primary religion, most are nominal practitioners.

NEED: In the poor Northeast, a convergence of violence, history, malnutrition and lack of services contribute to extreme poverty. A fifth of all adults are illiterate. The region is showing remarkable economic growth, which contributes to the disparity between the rich and poor, as well as new economic opportunities. Adults and children need an education and the message of the Gospel.

SOLUTION: Christ the Liberator Anglican Church, under the Diocese of Recife, will finish constructing the Anglican Center of Holistic Mission. It will include a church, an educational and professional training center, and a mission center. The educational and professional training center will help unemployed people learn new skills and provide youth with a formal education.

LIFE IMPACT

This project benefits 710 people, some in multiple ways:

WILLINGNESS: 195 students demonstrate increased willingness to engage with God's Word, including 60 who participate in a daily Bible study; 20 adult students who join a Bible study at least once; 100 children from the neighborhood (not enrolled in classes) who participate in a Bible-based outreach event and 15 non-believers who begin attending church after receiving computer training

UNDERSTANDING: 100 people show increased understanding of the Bible, including 50 youth who join a discipleship program and 50 adults who enroll in an adult discipleship program and are confirmed in the church

ACTION: 25 people take action inspired by God's Word, including 10 adults who volunteer at the school; 10 community members who sponsor 10 students to attend classes; and five missionaries who are trained there

COMMUNITY ENGAGEMENT: 390 people benefit, including 70 students who do better in school; 40 youth who develop an interest in reading; 20 adults who graduate from the program and share their increased income with their 80 household members; and 180 people who enroll in computer classes at the church

WHAT IT'S LIKE NOW

"Yet the Northeast remains Brazil's poorest region: It has 28 percent of the country's people but just 14 percent of its GDP. A fifth of the area's adults are illiterate, twice the national rate. And it holds more than half the 16 [million] Brazilians who live on less than 70 reais ($43) a month. For decades it has exported workers to the kitchens and construction sites of the rich cities in the southeast."

— www.economist.com/node/18712379, May 19, 2011

"IPOJUCA, Brazil — The industrial complex and port here are a showcase of the region's economic might, employing 55,000 workers and attracting billions in investments. But a couple of miles down the road, Netildes Delvina Soares, 47, lives 'with much suffering,' as she put it, in a wood-plank hut without plumbing or electricity.

"Although traditionally poor, Brazil's northeast is now home to the country's fastest-growing regional economy, making the disparity between prosperity and extreme poverty more visible here than anywhere else. And it is places such as this that the country's new president, Dilma Rousseff, is hoping to uplift as she pursues an ambitious goal: eradicating indigence, defined as earning less than $45 a month."

PROJECT DESIGN

Funding through the Anglican Diocese of Recife will allow Christ the Liberator Anglican Church to complete the facilities, including classrooms, bathrooms and a kitchen that will serve the educational and professional training center, the mission center and the church. The same contractors who built the church will build the center, with the help of community volunteers. Partners will provide supplies and furniture.

Once built, the facilities will provide the community with classroom space. The church has teachers lined up for reading workshops and classes for children, as well as English and literacy classes that use the Bible as source material. A psychologist will work one day a week with children with learning disabilities. Computer classes will use Windows applications, including Word, Excel and PowerPoint. Participants will be asked to pay a small fee, helping ensure their commitment to the program.

The mission center will train students in church planting and theology and help them raise support. The center will also enable the diocese to play a pivotal role in sending lay missionaries to the interior regions of Paraiba State. The diocese anticipates the church community supporting at least one-third of the funding necessary to send these missionaries.

Additionally, the Anglican Parish of the Savior, under the leadership of the Diocese of Recife, will receive 15 computers that will give the church administration financial management tools. The parish will also use the computers to offer computer classes to church members and members of the community. Training for the community will include a basic introduction to computers, as well as Word, Excel, PowerPoint and computer programming. Courses are a month long, with a minimum of 15 participants in each course.

Measuring impact. Project leaders will track students' progress using report cards. Semi-structured interviews will be conducted with youth and their parents to assess growth in literacy. Youth participating in reading workshops will complete pre- and post-training surveys to assess their interest. The diocese will track the number of people who gain employment after taking classes at the training center and the number of people involved in the discipleship program. The Anglican Parish of the Savior will report to the Diocese the number of attendees for each of the courses offered on a monthly basis.

ANALYSIS

Risk

CONCEPT: 1 This project is located within the poorest region of Brazil, an area that also has a high illiteracy rate. Through this project, youth, women and men will have opportunities to gain skills in reading, computers and technology, sewing, cooking and administration; children and youth will have access to formal education. The construction project aligns with the diocese's current program, "Project 26 X 22." The new facility will enable local churches to solidify their presence as a source of hope, and the mission center will train and send missionaries throughout the Northeast. The computerization of the Parish of the Savior will allow the church to streamline financial controls and provide additional transparency to donors. The equipment also creates an opportunity for unique outreach in the community through computer classes.

PROGRAM DESIGN & EXPERIENCE: 1 The diocese is heavily invested in this community and has been implementing holistic ministries for more than five years. It has clear indicators of engagement, defining them as both short-term and long-term. This building will create opportunities and provide services for children, youth, women, missionaries and nongovernmental organizations (NGOs). Over the years, the diocese has formed strong partnerships with several different organizations across sectors, including the government and private groups and local churches.

LEADERSHIP: 1 The Diocese of Recife is highly regarded within the community and has several skilled staff leading and implementing this project. The leadership team represents a diverse cross-section of professional experience, from law to psychopedagogy to theology. The diocese has a leadership contingency plan in place and draws from a strong network of volunteers.

FINANCIAL CONTROL: 4 The diocese does not have externally audited financial statements; however it was able to provide basic information regarding income and expenses. This project has the full endorsement of the Archbishop of the Diocese.

SUSTAINABILITY: 1 Since 2005, the community in Valentina de Figueiredo has contributed to this project, both financially and through labor and supplies. The Diocese of Recife is requesting additional funds in order to complete building construction and make the facility fully functional. Several partnering NGOs will provide computers, expertise, training and job placement services. Several private schools are donating furniture and Buon Gelato, an ice cream company, is donating both computers and groceries.

EXTERNAL: 1 The region is subject to political and economic instability. However, the Diocese of Recife has a proven track record of successfully implementing projects despite these conditions. Boat travel along the east coast is generally unsafe during the rainy season between May and September.

NOTES:

*Income and expenditures reported in U.S. dollars

INCOME: Total income for the Diocese of Recife dropped 27 percent from 2009 to Jan. 30, 2012. Operations were much different in 2010, with different sources of income and both income and expenses went down. In 2010, the major source of income was external grants, which made up 52 percent of total income. But in 2011, the major source of income was domestic subsidies, which comprised 77 percent of total income.

EXPENSES: The pattern of expenditures was similar to that of income when total expenditures were down 28 percent from 2009 to Jan. 30, 2012, and in 2010, which appears to have a different nature and level of operation than in 2009 or 2011. The pattern of expenditures in 2009 and 2011 is consistent with administrative costs comprising 71 percent and 76 percent of total expenditures, respectively. Pastors, financials and other costs comprise 25 percent and 22 percent in 2009 and 2011, respectively. Expenditures in 2009 exceeded income, resulting in a deficit of $2,831, which was partly financed by the balance brought forward from the previous period.

PROGRAM RECOMMENDATION

"I have seen two other social projects implemented in Recife and Olinda, Pernambuco State. Both have been successful and have stimulated community growth, training for youth who have gone on to gain employment and church participation."

BEST PRACTICES

Based on Global Scripture Impact's research, fund sustainable Outreach projects that:

- represent a long-term investment
- maintain pre-existing relationships
- mobilize local capital

Researcher's Statement

Lindsay Reilly
Research Analyst
April 2012

The Diocese of Recife has been instrumental in ministering to the spiritual and physical needs of people in Valentina de Figueiredo for more than 13 years. By completing this building, the diocese will be able to continue cultivating the vision of "Project 26 X 22," which is part of the diocese's vision of mobilizing the community through service, teaching and outreach. The local community supports this project, both financially and by volunteering. However, the diocese lacks externally audited financial statements.

Global Scripture Impact serves the American Christian philanthropic market by providing independent research and evaluation of Scripture ministry projects around the world, and supplying this information to interested supporters.

DEMOCRATIC REPUBLIC OF THE CONGO

Pastoral Training Strengthens Biblical Outreach and Boosts Community Development

In November 2011, members of the community repay their loans with part of their rice harvest. The loan project was conducted by the Anglican Diocese of Kindu at Katimba village, Kindu, Democratic Republic of the Congo.

COMPLETED PROJECT

A vast country with immense economic resources, the Democratic Republic of Congo (DRC) has been at the center of what some call Africa's world war. The conflict has claimed an estimated 3 million lives, either as a direct result of fighting or because of disease and malnutrition. After so many years of war, people in Eastern DRC are beginning to return home only to face reintegration problems, such as a lack of agricultural inputs, agricultural skills and transportation.

The Anglican Diocese of Kindu in the DRC sought to improve the socio-economic livelihood of Congolese families who are returning to their homes by giving them agricultural tools, certified seeds, livestock and fish farming opportunities. The result was improved food production, better farming practices and healthier living conditions. The beneficiaries repay the diocese out of their harvests, allowing the diocese to make even more loans to community members.

The project was expected to help 2,730 people, but actually reached more than 4,200 people. It exceeded one project goal and achieved a second, earning an overall rating of "Exceeded."

TRACK RECORD

The Anglican Diocese of Kindu has been implementing projects that assist families affected by the civil war since 1998. The projects include humanitarian work; agricultural development through training, distribution of farming tools and seeds; and peace and reconciliation efforts. The diocese uses this forum to preach the Gospel and pass along other messages of peace and reconciliation.

KENYA – PREVENTING THE SPREAD OF MALARIA

Grass-roots effort focuses on hygiene, mosquito nets and immunizations

The Anglican Relief and Development Fund

At nighttime, the children of Caroline Chishiya Omwolo sleep on the floor beside her bed. Here she hangs a new mosquito net over their sleeping area - a net she received through the Anglican Diocese of Maseno in Kenya. "I give thanks for the net, treatment during the clinics and the nutritional supplements given to me. May God bless you," said the 29-year-old mother of four children, including the 1-year-old she is holding.

COMPLETED PROJECT

Mosquito-borne malaria is one of the major public health issues in Kenya, with high transmission rates in the Western region. Malaria accounts for about 30 percent of all outpatient visits, 19 percent of all hospital admissions and causes approximately 34,000 deaths annually among children younger than 5. Approximately 23 million Kenyans (70 percent of the population) are at risk of developing malaria.

While malaria control has improved dramatically in the last few years, the levels are still below national targets. Unemployment is high and for the poor there is little access to medical care or education on hygiene — leaving pregnant women, nursing mothers and children especially vulnerable to malaria. To reduce illness and infant mortality due to malaria, pregnant women, mothers and volunteers need to be trained in malaria prevention techniques and to use insecticide-treated mosquito nets, which can drastically cut down on malaria infection and improve overall health. Students also need to learn to stay healthy and receive the proper immunizations.

This project exceeded one project goal, but fell short in reaching three others, earning an overall rating of "Below."

TRACK RECORD

This program expands a 2007 program by the Diocese of Maseno in the District of Siaya in which 89 community healthcare providers were trained to teach malaria prevention to 3,825 people. The diocese also partnered with local healthcare providers, schools, churches and the government. According to a 2007 Impact Assessment (1-107V8-1006), the project exceeded expectations and was well-received by villagers. A diocesan survey that followed showed that within six months, child mortality due to malaria dropped from 48 deaths to 19. Cases of malaria decreased from 98 children to 22, according to outreach clinics.

Restoring health, hope and dignity in JESUS' name

Building a training centre in Recife, Brazil

The Anglican Relief and Development Fund Canada is partnering with the Diocese of Recife, specifically Christ the Liberator Anglican Church, to complete construction of an Anglican Center of Holistic Mission. This classroom complex will be adjacent to the Church building, and will house an educational and vocational training centre, as well as a mission centre. The Centre will:

- Train unemployed people to learn new vocational skills.
- Provide children and youth with literacy and educational classes.
- Train lay missionaries to take the Good News to the poor and unreached.

Our funding of this project will enable Christ the Liberator, and its well-qualified project leaders, to address community issues of low education, unemployment and violence while meeting the spiritual needs of the neighborhood. We will help the Church also realize its vision of opening a missions centre that will train parishioners to reach the interior – northeast region – of Brazil with the Good News.

Goal: $61,600

The need

Brazil is the largest country in South America and home to more than 200 million people. While the country as a whole has experienced economic growth recently, the northeast region, where the Diocese of Recife is located, remains one of the poorest in Brazil, with a history of violence, poor education and a lack of services. According to the Economist, "It [the northeast region] has 28 percent of the country's people but just 14 percent of its GDP. A fifth of the area's adults are illiterate, twice the national rate." While the area recently began to experience economic growth, this has served to magnify the disparity between the rich and poor, the educated and those who have been denied opportunity.

The project

The project is located in "Conjunto Cidade Maravilhosa" in the neighborhood of "Valentina de Figueiredo", a suburb (of about 60,000) of João Pessoa city, the capital of Paraíba State, in Northeast Brazil where Christ the Liberator Anglican Church is located.
